

HOME RULE.

THE OTHER SIDE.

OUR SPECIAL WIRE.

Wednesday Morning.
The situation with regard to the Bill will be discussed in Mr. Birrell's speech at Leeds to-day. The Parliamentary Committee of the Daily Chronicle says that the Bill will carry the count at the point at which he left with his invitation to the informal interchange of views from the newspapers that for the time to make anything of the kind according to the "Daily Chronicle" is still in the hands of the Opposition. The "Daily Chronicle" indulges in the most disingenuous of what may be called "double dealing" in its attitude towards the Bill. It is on the one hand, in favour of the Bill, and on the other hand, it is against it. It is a double-dealing paper, and it is a double-dealing paper.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

THE WORLD'S NEWS.

NO CABINET SPLIT.

MR. BIRRELL AFFIRMS SOLIDARITY AS TO IRELAND.

UNCHANGING DEMAND.

NO ELECTION CAN EFFECT IRISH QUESTION.

The rumours of a Cabinet division on the Irish question were denied by Mr. Birrell, in a speech to his constituents in North Bristol last night. He repeated that any General Election could not get rid of the Irish demand. As Chief Secretary, he had to represent in Parliament a mode of government which did not enjoy the confidence of four-fifths of the population of Ireland, a people deeply and honestly convinced and he shared their conviction that the only way in which full justice could be done to the country was that there should be an Irish Parliament wholly subordinate to the Imperial Parliament, subject to the law and to the will of the Imperial Parliament.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

There were people in a corner of Ireland who were bitterly and strongly opposed to it, but, as he said, the whole Cabinet was in favour of it. As he stated in the Ladybank speech, subject to the conditions there set forth, the Government was willing to consider any reasonable proposal that might mitigate and obviate the objection of these people in North-East Ulster. We adhere to that. We are ready to do it, every honest man must desire that this new constitution should be set going under friendly conditions.

MORE FIRES IN CO. DUBLIN.

SUSPICION OF MALICE.

VICTIMS SYNDICALIST OPPONENTS.

Another of the extraordinary series of farm fires in North Dublin, which too clearly suggest malice, occurred yesterday. About 3 p.m., an outbreak at the farm of Miss Quinn, at Ballymore, Santry, destroyed about £200 worth of corn, hay, and straw. Miss Quinn has taken a prominent part in the Co. Dublin Farmers' Association movement, and was the first farm-owner to firmly resist the attacks by the Red Hand strike.

At the time of the occurrence Miss Quinn was in Dublin on business, with her sister, who had received a telephone message that her place was on fire. The only member of the household in the dwellinghouse at the time was the servant-girl. The haystack and hayracks were situated about 50 yards from the dwellinghouse, and when the girl discovered the fire it had then got a firm grip on one end of one of the haystacks.

The police at Santry were informed, and when Miss Quinn arrived the fire had made such headway that nothing could be done by the police and neighbours who were assisting to quell the flames, except to surround the dwellinghouse. After two or three hours the fire had spent its force. It was unnecessary to summon the Fire Brigade, and as there was no water supply at hand.

VICTIM OF A STRIKE.
District Inspector Cary, Howth, called later and took full particulars of the affair. One large haystack adjoining was protected by a tarpaulin, which kept the fire in the main sheds from spreading.

Miss Quinn is very popular in the locality and was always known as a kind and considerate employer. Her employees, however, were the first to obey the "Liberty" Hall manifesto and struck at a most critical period of the harvest, since her farm has been under police protection since the beginning of the strike trouble. The damage was covered by insurance.

HAY BURNED AT MALAHIDE.
On Monday night, at 11.30 about 30 tons of hay on the premises of Messrs. Flower and McDonald, coal merchants, at Malahide, was discovered to be on fire. The fire was extinguished, and the hay was somewhat under control, and prevented them spreading to Mr. Lough's house. The hay was still smouldering yesterday evening.

Insure with the Hibernian Fire and General Insurance Co. Ltd., Head Office, 49 Dame St., Dublin, for prompt settlements. The only General Irish Insurance Co.

THE MEXICAN STRUGGLE.

ENGAGEMENT AT JUAREZ.
HEAVY LOSSES ON BOTH SIDES.
(Reuters Cablegram.)

A telegram from El Paso states that a general engagement has begun between Mexican rebels and Federal troops at Juarez. The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

The rebels were engaged in heavy losses on both sides are reported. A train with eight dead and seventeen wounded has arrived at Juarez.

WHITE HOUSE BRIDE.

PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER MARRIED.

WORD "OBEY" OMITTED.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
New York, Tuesday.
In the famous East Room of the White House this afternoon Miss Jessie Wilson, second daughter of President Wilson, was married to Mr. Francis Bowes Sayre. Some 400 guests, including members of the families of the bride and bridegroom, personal friends, Cabinet Ministers, and diplomats, were present, and the President having withdrawn his request for morning dress, the uniforms of foreign diplomats, Attaches and Army and Navy officers added to the brilliancy of the scene.

The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Sylvester Beach, of Princeton, New Jersey, and the service followed was that of the Presbyterian Church. It was noticed, however, that the bride omitted the word "obey" in the bridal vows, but this caused little surprise, as the President's daughter has long taken an active interest in the feminist movement.

Simplicity marked the ceremony, but the White House has never been more gorgeously decorated. Punctually at half-past four the band of the U.S. Marine Corps struck up the Wedding March from "Lohengrin" as the bride and her attendants entered from the East Corridor.

A CHARMING PICTURE.
Leaning on her father's arm, the radiant bride wore a charming picture, in her dress of shimmering white satin, trimmed with rare old lace which has been in the possession of Mrs. Wilson's family for over a century. She was attended by her elder sister, Miss Margaret Wilson, as maid of honour, and four bridesmaids—Miss Helen Wilson, her younger sister, Miss Mary G. White, of Baltimore; Miss Adelaide Mitchell Scott, of Princeton, New Jersey; and Miss Margaret Brown, of Atlanta, Georgia.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The ceremony was not of long duration, and the newly married couple passed in procession to the Blue Room, where for over an hour they received the congratulations of the guests. The bride and bridegroom were then led off for the wedding breakfast, and considerable interest was manifested in the wedding-cakes, of which there were two, one for each of the bridesmaids, and the other for the bride. The cakes were decorated with the bride's name, and the bridegroom's name, and the date of the wedding.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

The bridegroom, a good-looking young man of 28, or two years older than the bride, was supported by Dr. Alfred Grenfell, the Labrador explorer, as best man, and four ushers.

IRISH VOLUNTEERS MOVEMENT.

SCENES AT INAUGURAL MEETING.

NOT DIRECTED AGAINST ULSTER.

The new "Irish Volunteer" movement was inaugurated last night at a meeting of about 700 persons in the Rotunda Rink, and at a time when the Rotunda Rink was at a low ebb of business. The proceedings, which were enthusiastic, were disturbed during the evening by some disorderly Larkinite scenes, one of the speakers being booed and denouncers and blank cartridges being exploded.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The spacious rink was crowded to an uncomfortable extent, the predominant element being young men, particularly students, long before 8 o'clock, when the proceedings were timed to commence. A large body of students marched to the hall in procession from the National University. A noticeable feature was the presence of a number of young ladies on a gallery specially set apart for them. Prior to the opening of the meeting, the Irish Volunteers were discovered by the St. James's Brass and Band.

"TIME FOR ACTION."
Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Vice-President of the Gaelic League, who presided, first addressed the gathering in Irish. Speaking in English, he said that his object was not to do anything but to raise action. "I am here," he said, "as a man worthy of the name that had not come to the conclusion that the time had come for action."

EMINENT IRISHMAN.

DEATH OF SIR ROBERT BALL.

ASTRONOMER'S CAREER.

Sir Robert Ball, the eminent astronomer, died yesterday evening at the Observatory, Cambridge, in his 73rd year. He had been ailing for a considerable time past. Sir Robert Stawell Ball, was born in Dublin in 1840, and was educated at Chester and at Trinity College, Dublin. In 1874 he was appointed Royal Astronomer of Ireland, which office he occupied until 1882, when he became Lowndes Professor of Astronomy and Geometry at Cambridge and Director of the University Observatory. The deceased was the best known lecturer of his day, as he was certainly the most popular. A ready speaker, he had a repertoire of twelve lectures totally distinct from each other, and these he was able to deliver without the use of notes. His voice was rich and clear, and together with a lively sense of humour, he had the advantage of being able to excite a serious interest in his subject by the bulk of the public with each wealth of picturesque detail that the duller person in his audience became infected with his enthusiasm.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.

The speakers representing different sections of Nationalist opinion, declared that the movement was not an aggressive one, but was intended to unite Irishmen, and preserve their rights and liberties. Subsequently, large numbers signed the declaration of membership.