Irish Prisoners Carried Off to England from Cork and Dublin

MILITARY PARTY DISARMED

Attack Near Queenstown: One Soldier Dies of Wounds

Ten political prisoners were deported on Saturday, eight from Cork and two from Dublin. Their destination is at present unknown. Six soldiers who had escorted explosives to Rushbrooke Dockyard, near Queenstown, were held up on their return journey. When ordered to surrender their arms, it is stated, one soldier, Private William Newman, offered resistance, and was shot. He died in hos

More military raids were carried out in Dublin on Saturday morning during the "Curfew" hours. A number of houses were minutely searched, the occupants being called out of bed, but no arrests or seizures have been renorted.

The opposition to it is complete, even though different purties oppose it for altogether dif-ferent reasons. Such a united front has not been preented against any legislation since the Aus of Union, and it will be interesting Mr. O'Connor said the Nationalists were to see if Mr. Lloyd George will carry into effect his threat if the Irish do not accept his Bill he will impose it on them.
The one feature of the Bill upon which all parties in the South unite in opposition is the scheme of partitioning the country under two Parliaments. The suggestion that such partition is only intended to be temporary meets with no support, since if two Parliaments were set up with full governmental paraphering a noble race, with an undying love for added.
