The Attorney-General for Ireland has authorised an inquiry to be held under the Crimes Act for the purpose of eliciting information with regard to the relations alleged to exist between certain Irish banks and the Sinn Fein organisation

Lord Robert Cecil, speaking on Saturday night, thought possibly the best methods of enforcing the law in Ireland had not been adopted. He was not sure the soldiers were the best people to carry on the civil government of the country. He did not think they should overcome the difficulty until they treated the Irishman as a grown man politically. He would offer the largest measure of Self-government possible consistent with the safety of the Empire. It was vital to get the difficult question settled.

Doon police barrack, Co. Limerick, was the scene of an attack on the familiar lines. None of the police were wounded. Possibly in connection with the matter the roads leading from Limerick to Threand Tipperary had been blocked during the night. Canon Kelly, P.P., denounced the attack, speaking at Mass in the local church.

The body of the man "Jameson," shot in Dublin suburbs, was claimed by his wife and taken to London. His name was John Charles Byrne, a native of Romford, Essex. The Fermoy strike has been settled.

Lord Justice O'Connor in the City Court, said there was no cases for trial, but that was no index. He regretted there had been six cases of raids for arms reported. An attack on the Post Office and the robbery of a large sum of money, a collision between police and people and two innocent lives lost.
